THE FATHER OF THE WEATHER.

Troubles Met by Mr. James P. Esby in Carrying out His Ideas.

(Bon: Porley Poore.)

James P. Esby is the father of the present system of weather signal service. He was a Pennsylvanian by birth, and so poor in early life that he had not been able to learn to read when he was seventeen years of age. He subsequently mastered the English language and the classics, and long before he knew why began to study the mystery of the moving clouds, and to form his storm theories. At last he came to Washington and asked of congress an appropriation of $5,000 a year for five years, but he was met with jibes and ridicule. Senator Preston of South Carolina said Esby was a madman, too dangerous to be at large, and the senator would vote a special appropriation for a prison in which to confine him. Esby was in the senate gallery at the time. Wounded to the quick, he left the capital and went to New York, where he delivered a course of lectures with great success. They were repeated in Boston, and he made money enough to enable him to visit Europe.

Not long after reaching Liverpool, Jan. 6, 1839, a great storm occurred. He went to Lloyd's, consulted the newspapers as they arrived, noted the direction of the wind as given at different places, and from these data constructed the first great storm map ever prepared, with the hour points marked. Every line and curve and point exemplified his theory. He was at no loss now for audiences. He appeared before the British association of scientists, at London, at which Sir John Herschel was present, an interested auditor. He crossed the channel to Paris, and the Academy of Sciences appointed a committee composed of the illustrious Arago, "to report upon his observations and theory." The effect of this report, when it reached Washington, was not much different from that which followed, afterwards, the announcement of Morse's first transmitted message over the wire from Washington to Baltimore.

In due time Professor Esby returned to Washington, and one of the first public men he encountered was Senator Preston. They met on Pennsylvania avenue. Towards the conclusion of their report, Mr. Arago's committee had expressed the hope that the government of the United States would place Mr. Esby in a position to continue his important investigations and complete his remarkable theory by means of all the observations and all the experiments which even the deductions of his theory may suggest in a vast country, the home as it were of the aerial meteors, storms, waterspouts and tornadoes. Senator Preston was prompt to apologize for the mistake he had made when his language drove Esby from the senate gallery, and he was as profuse in his promise to help the storm king on in the spirit of the French report. It is a matter of history that he did so: that Esby got his $25,000, and that to him Esby owed the first step in the formation of the present signal service. He published several reports, which are now very rare.

A Buddhist Temple for Paris.

According to M. Claretie, of the Paris Temps, Paris is shortly to possess a Buddhist temple. There are in the French capital a considerable number of Buddhists who have no place of public worship. The want is, it seems, to be supplied by a rich English lady. She has bought a plot of ground, and the masons are already at work. It appears that this is not the first time that a Buddhist temple has been opened in Paris. During the last international exhibition, when so many rich Hindoos came to France with numerous retinues, an application was made to M. Lardoux, then minister of public works, for permission to open a Buddhist temple in the vicinity of the Champ de Mars. The minister consented; but it was said that he had some difficulty in getting Marshal MacMahon to sign the necessary decrees. It is yielded only on his being pointed out to him that the guests of France could not be refused permission to perform their religious duties.

Bismarck Not Superstitious.

(Chicago Herald.)

The Prussian people believe that Bismarck is superstitious. They say that he is awed by apparitions in uninhabited castles, shrinks from dining where thirteen sit down at table, believes in unlucky days, and adheres to the ancient belief of the influence of the moon on every living thing. But, according to Dr. Busch, this is all nonsense, with the exception of a single story which happened at Schonhausen (where the chancellor heard mysterious footsteps in the ante-chamber of his bed-room). "The jests about my superstitions," he said a few months ago, "are nothing but jests, or consideration of the feelings of others. I will eat at table with twelve others as often as you like, and will undertake the most important and serious business on a Friday."

George Man's Ideal Life.

To throw yourself into the lap of mother nature; to take her really for mother and sister; to be really and religiously cut off from your life what is merely gratified vanity; to make yourself humble with the unfortunate, to weep with the misery of the poor; to acknowledge no other God than Him who ordains justice and equality among men; to venerate what is good to judge severely what is only strong; to live on very little, to give away nearly all, in order to re-establish primitive equality and bring back to life again the divine institution; that is the religion I shall proclaim in a little corner of my own.

In One Fell Swoop.

(Chicago News.)

Mr. Barnum has paid in one fell swoop the great debt of gratitude he owed the American press. He has offered $500 for the best poem on his white elephant, and turned the spring freshet of bad verses out of the newspaper channel.

Cassius M. Clay: I ask a hard question: Has not the press come to be the ruling power in Christendom, and is it not more corrupt in America than in any other civilized nation?
